WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA:

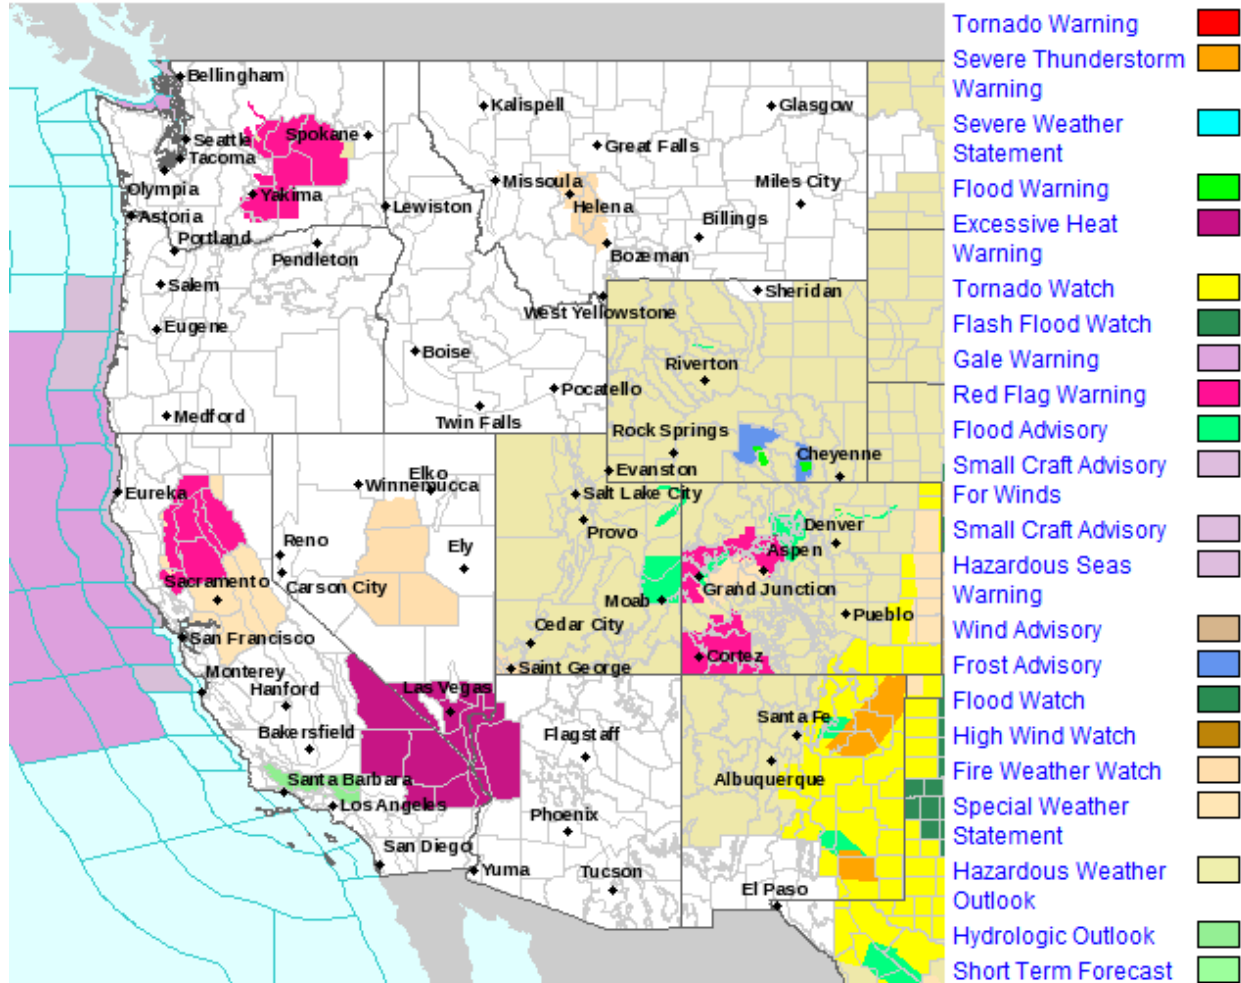

Poor relative humidity recovery and more gusty northerly winds will return for the next two nights with lighter winds tonight than Monday night. To complicate the weather pattern Monday, a weak low will be passing through the region, and isolated afternoon and evening thunderstorms will become possible over the western mountains from just north of Clear Lake to the Trinity Alps. Tuesday, a cooling trend will start as a low pressure system in the Gulf of Alaska drops south toward Vancouver Island. Major cooling is expected to begin Wednesday. Afternoon high temperatures will remain mostly 100-106 in the warmest inland areas for a few more days, drop to around 100 Tuesday, then into the lower and mid 90s the rest of the week. Westerly winds will return Wednesday and become quite strong Thursday afternoon that may lead to some rather low afternoon relative humidity east of the Cascade and Sierra crest.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

High pressure will briefly build into the region through Monday before a weak area of low pressure moves into the central portions of the state on Tuesday. As a result, temperatures will warm a few degrees during the next couple of days with daytime highs in the 90s across the inland valleys of southern California, and near 100 degrees in the interior valleys of Monterey and San Luis Obispo Counties as well as in the San Joaquin Valley. As the area of low pressure moves into the region on Tuesday, temperatures will lower by around 5 to 7 degrees across the inland areas, especially over central California. The marine layer will also deepen along the coast with stronger sea breezes expected in the afternoon. While little, if any convection is anticipated over the Sierra today or Monday, chances for isolated thunderstorms will increase slightly for Tuesday as the air-mass becomes more unstable. Any convection that may occur on Tuesday will be along and east of the Crest from Kings Canyon National Park on northward. Temperatures will change little throughout the region Wednesday through Saturday.

Fuels/Fire Potential

Gusty northerly winds and low relative humidity/poor overnight recovery will bring a "High Risk" designation to the Sacramento Valley and surrounding foothills today into early Tuesday due to the cured fuels there. The possible afternoon/evening lightning Monday will be too isolated and in areas where fuel conditions are not of enough concern yet to designate "High Risk" for the event.

Cal EOC Incident – 2014 Drought

Situational Summary

On January 17, 2014 Governor Edmund G. Brown proclaimed a State of Emergency and directed state officials to take all necessary actions to prepare for drought conditions. The State Operation Center (SOC) is activated to implement objectives in support of the Governor's priorities. The lack of winter rain and snowfall has resulted in extremely dry conditions in many parts of the State. Reservoir levels are down significantly from where they should be on average for this time of year. If conditions continue without substantial rainfall, severe impacts to municipal water supplies, agriculture (plants and livestock) and firefighting capabilities are likely in store for the State over the next few months. Negative economic impacts will also result.

*As our state's rainy season comes to an end, it is highly unlikely that precipitation totals will increase significantly. This winter's below average rain and snowfall worsens conditions in this third straight dry year.

The drought could result in severe impacts to the municipal water supplies, wells, agriculture (plants and livestock) and firefighting capabilities for several months. The SOC continues to be activated to monitor the situation statewide, and support regional and local operational areas.

- The Taskforce continues to meet regularly to take actions that conserve water and coordinate state response to the drought.
- The final manual snowpack survey of the season was conducted on Thursday (May 1) and showed California snowpack at 18% of normal. A more recent update using automated devices shows snowpack at 0% of normal as of June 3.
- DWR has announced that water essential for health and safety will be delivered through the state water project. The current State Water Project Allocation is 5%.
- Cal OES continues to gather drought-related costs from state agencies and local governments.
